

Fitness to Practise Committee – 16 February 2011

Practice Note(s): Burden of Proof

Executive summary and recommendations

Introduction

At a recent Legal assessor review day, a number of the attendees raised that the case law as it relates to finding fitness to practise impaired had ‘firmed up’ since the case of CRHP v. GMC and Biswas [2006] EWHC 464 (Admin). Biswas provides that

‘the burden of proof is the civil ‘balance of probabilities’ and only applies to finding of facts. Whether those facts amount to the statutory ground of the allegation and constitute impairment is not a matter which needs to be ‘proved’ but is a matter of judgement for the Panel.’

The accepted view now is that regulators only have to discharge the burden of proof in relation to proving the facts of the allegation. The statutory ground and the issue of impairment are matters for the judgement of the Panel based upon the proven facts

As a public authority HPC (as with all regulators), still need to make decisions on whether to take matters forward looking at fitness to practise ‘in the round’ (i.e looking at the facts, the statutory grounds and whether it is likely to impairment) and present the case as a whole. However, the Biswas decision does mean that a few Practice Notes required some limited changes.

The Practice notes Finding Fitness to Practise is “Impaired” and Drafting Fitness to Practise Decisions have also been further reviewed to take into account Brennan v Health Professions Council –[2011] EWHC 41 (Admin) and other learning that has arisen through the course of the year.

PRACTICE NOTE

“Case to Answer” Determinations

This Practice Note has been issued by the Council for the guidance of Practice Committee Panels and to assist those appearing before them.

Introduction

Article 26(3) of the Health Professions Order 2001¹ provides that, where an allegation is referred to the Investigating Committee, it shall consider, in the light of the information which it has been able to obtain and any representations or other observations made to it, whether in its opinion, there is a “case to answer”.

The “realistic prospect” test

In deciding whether there is a case to answer, the test to be applied by a Panel, based upon the evidence before it, is whether there is a “realistic prospect” that the HPC will be able to establish at a hearing that the registrant’s fitness to practise is impaired.

That test (which in some proceedings is also known as the “real prospect” test) is relatively simple to understand and apply. As Lord Woolf MR noted in *Swain v Hillman*²:

“The words ‘no real prospect of succeeding’ do not need any amplification, they speak for themselves. The word ‘real’ distinguishes fanciful prospects of success... or, as [Counsel] submits, they direct the court to the need to see whether there is a “realistic” as opposed to a “fanciful” prospect of success.”

Applying the test

In determining whether there is a case to answer, the Panel must decide whether, in its opinion, there is a “realistic prospect” that the HPC (which has the burden of proof)³ will be able to establish prove the facts alleged and, in consequence, that a determination will be made that the registrant’s fitness to practise is impaired.

The test does not call for substantial inquiry or require the Panel to be satisfied on the balance of probabilities. The Panel only needs to be satisfied that there is a realistic or genuine possibility (as opposed to remote or fanciful one) that the HPC will be able to establish its case.

In reaching its decision, a Panel:

- should recognise that it is conducting a limited, paper-based, exercise and not seek to make findings of fact on the substantive issues;
- may assess the overall weight of the evidence but should not seek to resolve substantial conflicts in that evidence. The assessment of the relative strengths of competing evidence can only be properly undertaken at a full hearing.

It is for the HPC to prove ~~its case~~ the facts alleged. Registrants are not obliged to provide any evidence but many will do so voluntarily and any such evidence should be considered by the Panel. However, it will rarely resolve matters at this stage, as it will typically conflict or compete with the HPC's evidence and, therefore, will need to be tested at a hearing.

In applying the test Panels need to take account of the wider public interest, including protection of the public and public confidence in both the regulatory process and the profession concerned.

The test applies to the whole of the allegation, that is:

1. the facts set out in the allegation;
2. whether those facts amount to the 'statutory ground' of the allegation (e.g. misconduct or lack of competence); and
3. in consequence, whether fitness to practise is impaired.

In the majority of cases, the evidence will relate solely to the facts and, typically, this will be evidence that certain events involving the registrant occurred on the dates, and at the places and times alleged.

It will be rare for separate evidence to be provided on the 'statutory ground' or the issue of impairment, and as these will largely be a matter of inference are matters of judgement for the Panel. For example, does, ~~such as whether~~ the factual evidence suggests that the service provided by the registrant fell below the standard expected of a reasonably competent practitioner or that the registrant's actions constitute misconduct when judged against the established norms of the profession. In reaching that decision the Panel may wish to have regard to the HPC Standards of Proficiency or Standards of Conduct, Performance and Ethics.

Impaired fitness to practise

In deciding whether there is a realistic prospect that fitness to practise is impaired Panels should consider the nature and severity of the allegation.

People do make mistakes or have lapses in behaviour and HPC would not be enhancing public protection by creating a 'climate of fear' which leads registrants to believe that any and every minor error or isolated lapse will result in an allegation being pursued against them.

Determining, on the basis of a limited, paper-based exercise, whether ~~the HPC has~~ there is a realistic prospect of establishing impairment can sometimes be difficult. A useful starting point for Panels is to consider whether the HPC's case includes evidence which, if proven, would show that the registrant does not meet a key requirement of being fit to practise, in the sense that the registrant:

- is not competent to perform his or her professional role safely and effectively;
- fails to establish and maintain appropriate relationships with service users, colleagues and others; or
- does not act responsibly, with probity or in manner which justifies the public's trust and confidence in the registrant's profession.

A presumption of impairment should be made by Panels in cases where the evidence, if proven, would establish:

- serious or persistent lapses in the standard of professional services;
- incidents involving:
 - harm or the risk of harm;
 - reckless or deliberate acts;
 - concealment of acts or omissions, the obstruction of their investigation, or attempts to do either;
- sexual misconduct or indecency (including any involvement in child pornography);
- improper relationships with, or failure to respect the autonomy of, service users;
- violence or threatening behaviour;
- dishonesty, fraud or an abuse of trust;
- exploitation of a vulnerable person;
- substance abuse or misuse;
- health problems which the registrant has but has not addressed, and which may compromise the safety of service users;
- other, equally serious, activities which undermine public confidence in the relevant profession.

No case to answer

A decision that there is "no case to answer" should only be made if there is no realistic prospect of ~~the HPC proving its case~~ a finding of impairment being made at a final hearing, for example, because there is insufficient evidence to substantiate the allegation, or the available evidence is manifestly unreliable or discredited or the evidence, even if found proved, would be insufficient for another Panel to make a finding of impairment. In cases where there is any element of doubt, Panels should adopt a cautious approach at this stage in the process and resolve that conflict by deciding that there is a case to answer.

PRACTICE NOTE

Case Management and Directions

This Practice Note has been issued by the HPC for the guidance of Practice Committee Panels and to assist those appearing before them.

Introduction

Practice Committee Panels determine whether an allegation is well founded by means of an adversarial hearing process which is civil in nature and, consequently, to which the civil rules of evidence and the civil standard of proof (“the balance of probabilities”) apply. However, in such proceedings:

- it is for the HPC to prove its case; prove ~~its case~~ the facts alleged;¹ and
- the registrant has a right against self-incrimination.

The interests of justice are best served by a process which is simple, accessible and fair and where the issues in dispute are identified at the earliest opportunity. Those objectives can be secured by case management procedures which require:

- the HPC to set out its case;
- the registrant to identify in advance those elements of the HPC’s case which he or she disputes; and
- the parties to provide information to assist the Panel in the management of the case.

Expecting registrants to participate in this process is not contrary to their rights as, if they wish to deny every element of an allegation, they retain the right to do so.

Case management

Effective case management is a process which enables:

- the issues in dispute to be identified at an early stage;
- arrangements to be put in place to ensure that evidence, whether disputed or not, is presented clearly and effectively;

¹ The burden of proof only applies to findings of fact. Whether those facts amount to the ‘statutory ground’ of the allegation (e.g. misconduct) and constitute impairment is a matter of judgement for the Panel conducting the final hearing: CRHP v. GMC and Biswas [2006] EWHC 464 (Admin).

- the needs of any witnesses to be taken into account; and
- an effective programme and timetable to be established for the conduct of the proceedings.

Article 32(3) of the Health Professions Order 2001 requires fitness to practise proceedings to be conducted expeditiously. Panels should meet that obligation by using their case management powers to ensure that cases are dealt with fairly and justly. This includes dealing with cases in a manner which:

- is proportionate to its importance and complexity, the resources of the parties and the anticipated costs;
- encourages the engagement of and co-operation among the parties;
- avoids inflexibility or unnecessary formality in the proceedings;
- ensures, so far as practicable, that the parties are able to participate fully in the proceedings;
- makes effective use of the Panel's expertise; and
- avoids undue delay.

Directions

Article 32(3) enables Practice Committees to give directions for the conduct of cases and for the consequences of failure to comply with such directions.

Where appropriate, Panels are expected to use their powers to give Directions to ensure that, at an early stage, the parties:

- exchange documents;
- identify the written evidence they intend to introduce and the other exhibits or material they wish to present;
- identify witnesses that are expected to give oral evidence, the order in which they will do so and any special arrangements which need to be made for a witness;
- request any witness or disclosure orders which are required to compel the attendance of a witness or the production of evidence;
- draw attention to any point of law that they intend to raise which could affect the conduct of the hearing; and indicate the timetable they expect to follow.

Standard Directions

To improve the management of cases, the following Standard Directions will apply automatically as “default” directions in every case.

Panels should actively manage cases to ensure compliance with those Directions or, where a Panel considers it appropriate, the Panel may (of its own motion or at the request of one of the parties) give Special Directions for the conduct of that case which disapply, vary or supplement the Standard Directions.

Standard Direction 1. Exchange of Documents

(1) The HPC shall, no later than 42 days before the date fixed for the hearing of the case, serve on the registrant a copy of the documents which the HPC intends to rely upon at that hearing.

(2) The registrant shall, no later than 28 days before the date fixed for the hearing of the case, serve on the HPC a copy of the documents which he or she intends to rely upon at the hearing.

(3) The parties shall, at the same time as they serve documents in accordance with this Direction, provide the Panel with five copies of those documents.

Standard Direction 2. Notice to admit facts

(1) A party may serve notice on another party requiring that party to admit the facts, or part of the case of the serving party, specified in the notice.

(2) A notice to admit facts must be served no later than 21 days before the date fixed for the hearing of the case.

(3) If the other party does not, within 14 days, serve a notice on the first party disputing the fact or part of the case, the other party is taken to admit the specified fact or part of the case.

Standard Direction 3. Notice to admit documents

(1) A party may serve notice on another party requiring that party to admit the authenticity of a document or exhibit disclosed to that party and specified in the notice.

(2) A notice to admit documents (together with those documents unless they have already been provided to the other party) must be served no later than 21 days before the date fixed for the hearing of the case.

(3) If the other party does not, within 14 days, serve a notice on the first party disputing the authenticity of the documents or exhibits, the other party is taken to accept their authenticity and the serving party shall not be required to call witnesses to prove those documents or exhibits at the hearing.

Standard Direction 4. Notice to admit witness statements

(1) A party may serve notice on another party requiring that party to admit a witness statement disclosed to that party and specified in the notice.

(2) A notice to admit a witness statement (together with that statement unless it has already been provided to the other party) must be served no later than 21 days before the date fixed for the hearing of the case.

(3) If the other party does not, within 14 days, serve a notice on the first party requiring the witness to attend the hearing and give oral evidence (and thus be available for cross examination), the other party is taken to accept the veracity of the statement and the serving party shall not be required to call the witness to give evidence at the hearing.

Standard Direction 5. Withdrawal of admissions

The Panel may allow a party, on such terms as it thinks just, to amend or withdraw any admission which that party is taken to have made in relation to any notice served on that party under Standard Directions 2 to 4.

PRACTICE NOTE

Finding that Fitness to Practise is “Impaired”

This Practice Note has been issued by the Council for the guidance of Practice Committee Panels and to assist those appearing before them.

Introduction

In determining whether allegations are “well founded”, Panels of the Conduct and Competence Committee and the Health Committee are required to decide whether the HPC, which has the burden of proof, in relation to the facts alleged, has discharged that burden and proved that, in consequence, whether the registrant’s fitness to practise is impaired.

The burden of proof is the civil ‘balance of probabilities’ and only applies to findings of fact. Whether those facts amount to the statutory ground of the allegation and constitute impairment is not a matter which needs to be ‘proved’ but is a matter of judgement for the Panel.¹

Impairment

An allegation is comprised of three elements, which Panels are required to consider sequentially:

1. whether the facts set out in the allegation are proved;
2. whether those facts amount to the statutory ground set out in the allegation (e.g. misconduct or lack of competence); and
3. in consequence, whether the registrant’s fitness to practise is impaired.

It is important for Panels to note that the test of impairment is expressed in the present tense; that fitness to practice “is impaired”. As the Court of Appeal noted in GMC v Meadow:²

“...the purpose of FTP procedures is not to punish the practitioner for past misdoings but to protect the public against the acts and omissions of those who are not fit to practise. The [Panel] thus looks forward not back. However, in order to form a view as to the fitness of a person to practise today, it is evident that it will have to take account of the way in which the person concerned has acted or failed to act in the past”.

Thus, although the Panel's task is not to "punish for past misdoings", it does need to take account of past acts or omissions in determining whether a registrant's present fitness to practice is impaired.

Factors to be taken into account

In *Cohen v GMC*³ the High Court stated that it was "critically important" to appreciate the different tasks which Panels undertake at each of step in the adjudicative process.

The initial task for the Panel is:

"to consider the [allegations] and decide on the evidence whether the [allegations] are proved in a way in which a jury... has to decide whether the defendant is guilty of each count in the indictment. At this stage, the Panel is not considering any other aspect of the case, such as whether the [registrant] has a good record or... performed any other aspect of the work... with the required level of skill".

Subsequently, the Panel is:

"concerned with the issue of whether in the light of any misconduct [etc.] proved, the fitness of the [registrant] to practise has been impaired taking account of the critically important public policy issues".

Those "critically important public policy issues" which must be taken into account by Panels were described by the court as:

"the need to protect the individual patient and the collective need to maintain confidence in the profession as well as declaring and upholding proper standards of conduct and behaviour which the public expect... and that public interest includes amongst other things the protection of patients and maintenance of public confidence in the profession".

Thus, in determining whether fitness to practise is impaired, Panels must take account of a range of issues which, in essence, comprise two components:

1. the 'personal' component: the current competence, behaviour etc. of the individual registrant; and
2. the 'public' component: the need to protect service users, declare and uphold proper standards of behaviour and maintain public confidence in the profession.

As the court noted in Cohen, the sequential approach to considering allegations means that not every finding of misconduct etc. will automatically result in a Panel concluding that fitness to practice is impaired, as:

“There must always be situations in which a Panel can properly conclude that the act... was an isolated error on the part of the... practitioner and that the chance of it being repeated in the future is so remote that his or her fitness to practise has not been impaired...”

It must be highly relevant in determining if... fitness to practise is impaired that... first the conduct which led to the charge is easily remediable, second that it has been remedied and third that it is highly unlikely to be repeated”.

It is important for Panels to recognise that the need to address the “critically important public policy issues” identified in Cohen - to protect patients, declare and uphold proper standards of behaviour and maintain public confidence in the profession - means that they cannot adopt a simplistic view and conclude that fitness to practise is not impaired simply on the basis that, since the allegation arose, the registrant has corrected matters or “learned his or her lesson”.

As indicated in Brennan v HPC,⁴ in cases where a Panel makes a finding of impairment or imposes a sanction solely on the basis of the ‘public’ components of an allegation, it must explain the reasons for that decision. It is insufficient simply to recite that, for example, it is necessary in order to maintain public confidence in the profession.

Degree of harm and culpability

In assessing the likelihood of the registrant causing similar harm in the future, Panels should take account of:

- the degree of harm caused by the registrant; and
- the registrant’s culpability for that harm.

In considering the degree of harm, Panels must consider the harm caused by the registrant, but should also recognise that it may have been greater or less than the harm which was intended or reasonably foreseeable.

The degree of harm cannot be considered in isolation, as even death or serious injury may result from an unintentional act which is unlikely to be repeated. The registrant’s culpability for that harm should also be considered. In assessing culpability, Panels should recognise that deliberate and intentional harm is more serious than harm arising from the registrant’s reckless disregard of risk which, in turn, is more serious than that arising from a negligent act where the harm may not have been foreseen by the registrant.

Character evidence

In deciding whether conduct “is easily remediable, has been remedied and is highly unlikely to be repeated”, Panels may also need to consider ‘character evidence’ of a kind which, in other proceedings, might only be heard as mitigation or aggravation as to sanction after a finding had been made.

⁴ [2011] EWHC 41 (Admin)

Whilst it is appropriate for Panels to do so, in admitting character evidence for the purpose of determining impairment, they must exercise caution. As the Court of Appeal noted in The Queen (Campbell) v General Medical Council,⁵ issues of culpability and mitigation are distinct and need to be decided sequentially and:

“The fact that in some cases there will be an overlap, or that the same material may be relevant to both issues, if they arise, does not justify treating evidence which is exclusively relevant to personal mitigation as relevant to the prior question, whether [the allegation] has been established.”

In deciding whether to admit character evidence, Panels must draw a distinction between evidence which has a direct bearing on the findings it must make and evidence which is simply about the registrant’s general character. The latter will only be relevant if the Panel needs to hear mitigation against sanction.

When considering impairment, Panels may properly take account of evidence such as the registrant’s competence in relation to the subject matter of the allegation; the registrant’s actions since the events giving rise to the allegations; or the absence of similar events. However, Panels should not normally rely on such evidence if it is disputed by the registrant and has not yet been the subject of a determination by a professional regulator or a court

Character evidence of a more general nature which has no direct bearing on the findings to be made by the Panel, should not be admitted at this point. Expressions of regret or remorse will usually fall within the latter category. However, where there is evidence that, by reason of insight, that regret or remorse has been reflected in modifications to the registrant’s practice, then it may be relevant to the question of impairment.

In deciding whether to admit character evidence at the impairment rather than the sanction phase, Panels need to consider whether the evidence may assist them to determine whether fitness to practise is impaired. Whilst caution needs to be exercised, an over-strict approach should not be adopted as, it is important that all evidence which is relevant to the question of impairment is considered, such as evidence as to the registrant’s general competence in relation to a competence allegation.

In considering evidence of impairment, Panel’s will readily recognise and be able to disregard character evidence of a general nature which is unlikely to be relevant. However, as the decision in *Cheatle v GMC*⁶ highlights, Panels must be careful not to refuse to hear evidence at the impairment phase about a registrant’s general professional conduct which, when heard at the sanction phase, raises doubts about their conclusion that the registrant’s fitness to practise is impaired.

⁶ [2009] EWHC 645 (Admin)

The sequential approach

As noted above, Panels should adopt a sequential approach to determining whether fitness to practise is impaired. In doing so Panels should act in a manner which makes it clear that they are applying the sequential approach by:

- first determining whether the facts as alleged are proved;
- if so, then determining whether the proven facts amount to the 'ground' (e.g. misconduct) of the allegation;
- if so, hearing further argument on the issue of impairment and determining whether the registrant's fitness to practise is impaired; and
- if so, hearing submissions on the question of sanction and then determining what, if any, sanction to impose.

It is important that these four steps should be and be seen to be separate but that does not mean that Panels must retire four times in every case. Whether the Panel needs to retire at each and every step in the process will depend upon the nature and complexity of the case.

Whilst there is no general obligation in law to give separate decisions on finding of fact, in more complex cases it may be necessary to do so. As the Court of Appeal stated in Phipps v General Medical Council:⁷

“every Tribunal ... needs to ask itself the elementary questions: is what we have decided clear? Have we explained our decision and how we have reached it in such a way that the parties before us can understand clearly why they have won or why they have lost?”

If in asking itself those questions the Tribunal comes to the conclusion that in answering them it needs to explain the reasons for a particular finding or findings of fact that, in my judgment, is what it should do. Very grave outcomes are at stake. Respondents ... are entitled to know in clear terms why such findings have been made.”

PRACTICE NOTE

Drafting Fitness to Practise Decisions

This Practice Note has been issued by the Council for the guidance of Practice Committee Panels and to assist those appearing before them.

TO ASSIST PANELS IN THE DRAFTING OF CONDITIONS OF PRACTICE ORDERS, A 'BANK' OF DRAFT CONDITIONS IS ANNEXED TO THIS PRACTICE NOTE

Introduction

Practice Committee Panels have a legal duty to provide reasons for their decisions, both at common law and as a facet of the right to a fair hearing which is protected by Article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

Beyond that legal duty, Panels have an obligation to explain the decisions they reach and the reasons for them, as part of the open and transparent processes which the HPC seeks to operate.

Background

The decision in Threlfall v General Optical Council [2004] EWHC 2683 (Admin) identified that Practice Committees have a duty to provide adequate reasons for their decisions and that the duty arises:

- at common law; on the basis that a Panel must give adequate reasons for its decision in order to enable the registrant concerned to exercise the right of appeal. Without knowing the basis for the decision, that right of appeal may be rendered illusory and both the parties and the appellate court must be able to understand why the Committee reached its decision.
- as part of the Article 6 ECHR obligations to provide a fair hearing associated with the determination of civil rights and obligations. In deciding whether the requirements of Article 6 are met, the whole of the proceedings, including the availability of an appeal to the courts, must be considered. Inevitably, the effectiveness of the right of appeal may depend on the Panel providing adequate reasons.
- as a practical consideration, in that Panels should give adequate reasons for their decisions to enable CHRE to consider whether it wishes to challenge the decision using its powers under section 29 of the NHS Reform and Healthcare Professions Act 2002.

What should a decision include?

Whatever decision a Panel reaches, it should be recorded in a manner which explains what the Panel decided and, just as importantly why it did so. The decision should be written in a form that enables the reasonably intelligent reader to understand the issues before the Panel, its findings and decision and the reasons for them without the need to refer to any other materials.

The decision should include:

- any preliminary matters dealt with by the Panel;
- a summary of the background to the case. This should be set out in sufficient detail to enable a person to read the decision and understand the nature and circumstances of the allegations without the to refer to other documents;
- the findings of fact made by the Panel. Allegations are based upon facts and the Panels should identify the facts which were undisputed, the facts in dispute and in relation to latter, the findings of fact which it made and why;
- the conclusions reached by the Panel on any submissions made by the parties;
- whether or not the facts amount to the statutory ground(s) set out in the allegation and why. For example, why the findings are considered to amount to misconduct, lack of competence etc.;
- in consequence, whether or not the Panel has determined that fitness to practise is impaired and why. In cases where impairment is not found, the Panel should nonetheless be clear about whether the facts were found proved on the statutory ground(s) found to be met;
- any advice that was received from the Legal Assessor and whether that advice was accepted. It is particularly important for Panels to record in detail any decision to disregard the advice given by a Legal Assessor and the reasons for so doing;
- any evidence given by way of mitigation or aggravation and the findings that the Panel made on the basis of that evidence;
- any sanction that was imposed, why it was appropriate¹ and, if it does not accord with the HPC Indicative Sanctions Policy, the specific circumstances of the case which justify that deviation;
- any other procedural issues such as requests for adjournments or Human Rights Act challenges and how they were dealt with.

¹ As indicated in Brennan v HPC ([2011] EWHC 41 (Admin)), where a sanction is imposed for public interest reasons, such as maintaining professional standards or upholding public confidence in the profession concerned, the Panel must explain the reasons for that sanction and not simply recite that it is being done for those public interest purposes.

In cases where a Panel has ruled that all or part of the proceedings are to be conducted in private, careful consideration needs to be given to the information which is included in any public decision issued at the conclusion of those proceedings.

The case law of the Strasbourg Court, notably *B v United Kingdom*² makes clear that the Article 6(1) requirement for decisions “to be pronounced publicly” should not be interpreted literally and that doing so in cases where evidence has been heard in private may frustrate the primary aim of that Article:

This issue is dealt with in more detail in the HPC Practice Note ‘Conducting Hearings in Private’.

Drafting Style

The length and detail of decisions will vary according to nature and complexity of case before the Panel and the decision it has reached. However, Panels should seek to establish a consistent approach to drafting decisions and, so far as possible, they should be comprehensive and written in plain English.

Decisions should:

- be written in clear and unambiguous terms; avoiding jargon, technical or esoteric language or explaining any which must be used;
- be written using short sentences and short paragraphs;
- avoid complicated or unfamiliar words and use precise but everyday language (e.g. “start” instead of “commence”);
- be written for the target audience, so that the registrant concerned, any complainant and other interested parties can understand the decision reached and the reasons for it;
- be self-contained so that, without any other materials, the reasonably intelligent and literate reader is able to understand the case before the Panel, the decision it reached and why it did so;

Drafting Orders

Where a Panel finds a registrant’s fitness to practise is impaired and imposes a sanction upon the registrant, its decision must clearly set out the Order which it has made.

Caution Orders, Suspension Orders and Striking Off Orders should all be expressed in a form which is addressed to the Registrar who, in accordance with the Panel’s decision, must annotate or amend the Register from the date that the order takes effect (i.e. once any period for making an appeal has expired, or any such appeal has concluded or been withdrawn). For example:

² (2002) 34 EHRR 19

Caution Order

ORDER: That the Registrar is directed to annotate the register entry of [name] with a caution which is to remain on the register for a period of [three] year(s) from the date this order comes into effect.

Suspension Order

ORDER: That the Registrar is directed to suspend the registration of [name] for a period of [x] year(s) from the date this order comes into effect.

Striking Off Order

ORDER: That the Registrar is directed to strike the name of [Registrant] from the Register on the date this order comes into effect.

The opening paragraph of any Conditions of Practice Orders should similarly be addressed to the Registrar, but making appropriate reference to the registrant, and the detailed conditions should be written in the second person so that they are clearly addressed to the registrant concerned. For example:

Conditions of Practice

ORDER: The Registrar is directed to annotate the Register to show that, [for a period of [time]] from the date that this Order comes into effect (“the Operative Date”), you, [name of registrant], must comply with the following conditions of practice:

1. Within [time period] of the Operative Date you must etc.....

Drafting Conditions of Practice

From the above examples it is clear that the drafting of Conditions of Practice Orders is the more difficult task. This is especially so given that Orders do not take effect on a fixed date, but only when the relevant appeal period has expired or any appeal has been disposed of or withdrawn.

For the other forms of Order, which simply run for a fixed period of years, this does not cause much difficulty. However, conditions of practice inevitably involve periodic compliance arrangements. If conditions of practice are to work, then the dates on which evidence of compliance is to be sent to the HPC must be clear and certain, so that appropriate follow up action can be taken in respect of those who fail to comply. The simplest means of overcoming this difficulty is to define the date on which the Order finally takes effect as its “Operative Date” and then to relate all other dates and time limits to that Operative Date.

In drafting Conditions of Practice Orders, Panels also need to consider the following three issues:

- are the conditions realistic?

Will the registrant be able to comply with these conditions; are they proportionate; do they provide the necessary level of public protection; and will they work if the registrant changes jobs?

For example, if the conditions require the registrant to improve treatment premises, facilities or equipment, they should only be set at the standard reasonably required of a typical practitioner from the profession or specialism concerned. In setting conditions of this kind, Panels should take account of any relevant guidance issued by professional bodies or similar organisations.

Equally, if conditions have been prepared with the support of the registrant's employer and are thus job-related, it may be necessary to include a condition requiring the registrant to inform HPC of any job changes.

- are the conditions verifiable?

Do they impose obligations that require straightforward 'yes' or 'no' compliance decisions; do they simply require the registrant to do something or must they also prove it has been done; can the due dates be clearly determined?

For example, conditions requiring a registrant not to deal with certain types of case or service user may not need ongoing proof of compliance but many other conditions will need to be supported by evidence, such as periodic written confirmation that the registrant is continuing to undergo alcohol dependency treatment. Where evidence is required it should be in a form which allows 'yes' or 'no' decisions to be made. Conditions requiring registrants to submit documents or records to the HPC for assessment or audit will not meet this requirement.

In cases where compliance with conditions may need to be verified by HPC by means of inspection - for example, conditions to improve premises, facilities or record keeping systems or chaperoning arrangements - the Panel's order should include a specific requirement that the registrant must allow and co-operate with inspection by the HPC upon reasonable notice.

- are the conditions directed at the right person?

Do the conditions clearly impose obligations on the registrant; are any conditions mistakenly directed at someone else?

It is for the registrant to comply with the conditions which have been imposed and, in drafting orders, care must be taken not to inadvertently impose a condition on a third party, such as an employer or GP. There is a significant difference between “you must submit to the Committee evidence from the doctor treating you that...” and “your GP must submit to the Committee evidence that...”

In addition, care must be taken in determining exactly what evidence should be sought from third parties, to ensure that registrants are not asked to provide evidence which they cannot obtain. For example, many alcohol or drug dependency support and self-help organisations may be willing to confirm that a person is attending meetings etc. but, as a matter of policy will not comment further.

Conditions Bank

Example conditions of practice are provided in the 'Conditions Bank' set out in the Annex to this Practice Note. Those conditions are not intended to be either prescriptive or definitive but are intended to assist Panels in the drafting of Conditions of Practice Orders.

Advice from the Legal Assessor

Panels are reminded that Article 34(3) of the Order allows Legal Assessors to assist the Panel in drafting their decisions. Panels should take advantage of the expertise Legal Assessors can offer in helping them to draft decisions, especially in relation to decisions which include conditions of practice orders.

The Legal Assessor's role is to assist in the drafting of the decision, not in the making of that decision. Panels should have established a clear outline of their decision, including their findings they have made in relation to the evidence and their determination on the issue of impairment, before asking the Legal Assessor to join them to assist in drafting their decision.

It is important for Panels to ensure that no confusion arises on the part of the registrant or any other party about the role of the Legal Assessor in that part of the process. Before retiring to make their decision, Panels should invite the Legal Assessor to explain this aspect of their role to the parties. Alternatively, the Panel should return from its deliberations and explain to the parties that it has reached a decision and that the Legal Assessor is now being asked to assist the Panel in the drafting of that decision.
